Up the Pike-A Glimpse at Old Fairfax and Loudoun

[Correspondence of the ALEXANDRIA GAZETTE.] Within the past few weeks, a grey horse drawing a jump seat carriage took the pike westward from Alexandria, not withoutsome computctions on the part of his owner at the long drive undertaken, to the utter disr-gard of the cheap and quick railroau transpertation at hand. The objective point was the meeting of the Potomac Baptist Association at "Mt. Hope" church, five miles from Farmwell. the Little River Pike is the great thor oughfare for Fairfax and Loudoun counties. Its elevations afford lovely views, while the diversity of quality and conformation in the land along the way and the alternations of beautiful new cottages and rural conveniences with homes of more antiquated character, combine to make the journey pleasing. The pike cuts through and separates, in many cases, the farmer's dwelling from his barnes, stables, &c.

The first day the grey borse, "Flippo," by name, turns in and gets a square noon meal at the truly hospitable home of George K. Pickett, a mile east of Annandale. Then taking on another passenger, Mr. Pickett himself, we pass Annandale, then on till we find ourselves traversing the classic precincts of Fairfax C. H. A pleasant disappointment greets the writer. Two score years and more he has lived and most of it in old Alexandria, and yet he never before had looked upon Fairfax C. H.. It is a pleashad looked upon Fairfax C. H., It is a pleas ing little village. The cottages of Mr. Farr and of Mr. Richardson are especially neat and of Mr. Richardson are especially near and attractive.

Folks stop us along the road at intervals. The sensation of the day is the gubernatorial convention; and many are the words of cheer and counsel exchanged with passing friends. Mr. George K Pickett, who is the democratic candidate for the legislature, knows everybody and everybody's home, we pass Chantilly, the great estate, with its stops out to posts standing lonely and dreary We pass Chantilly, the great estate, with its stone gate posts standing lonely and dreary as evidences of former grandeur. My companion's eye glistens with appreciation of the scene as we take in the lovely undulations of the large fields and fine farming land in general in this vicinity, but our spiring down a little as we go past other fields poor enough to make a Digger Indian give up scratching for a living.

It is quite dark when we stop. We have crossed over into Loudoun and are chiefly exercised about lodging and supper. We will be long remembered. Some of the ministers have taken to themselves the goodly crown of whitening hair. We cannot think them old. The "grove" in which open air preaching is held is 100 far from the church. There are sermons of a bigh order. Rev. I. M. Mercer, of Alexandria, touches bigh water mark in a grand sermon—constituting the "Introductory." At the "stand" Rev. Dr. Owens, of Portsmouth, Va., Rev. Geo. W. Quick, of Springfield, Mass., and Rev. Curt. J. Company of Landau, Constr. Va. present tis Laws, of Loudoun county, Va., preach acceptably to large crowds. An important part of the "Association" consists in going home with your entertainers. It was the good fortune of the undersigned to spend a delightrul evening at the lovely residence of Robert McCormick, esq, between Aldie and Middleburg. It is worth going many miles to exterience their hospitality. Their ample mansion has taken in some summer boarders from Washington, who form a group of most interesting and agreeable folks. The lovely Mrs. Dunlop shines as one of the most charming members of the group.

But the "Association" ends. Brethren sing "Blest be the tie" and shake hands so tearfully that the hymo goes up with many quavers and breaks. Then we make for our vehicles. The grey horse takes on another passenger for the home trip—Rev. Mr. Mercer. We lose sight reluctantly of kindly faces, notably that of Mr. Hutcheson living a short distance from the church. How comfortable the entertainments these cattle princes give a We enjoyed a specimen of his hospitality Thursday night.

But here we go! We steer through the jam of carriages, and the last glimpse of the "association" scenes shows John Sowers 'association" transcendantly happy with a young lady in his narrow dog-cart and a dozen miles of travel before them !

Late Friday night we paused at Fairfax C. H, and got supper. There was all the news and we took in the latest from the convention. The old town was all agog. It had two sensations-the meeting of the Good Templars and all the en husiastic hilarity of the returning delegates from Richmond I wonder how the two matter.

Then near midnight we are again at the home of George Pickett, and that gentle-man plays host again. Mr. Pickett is a gen tleman of a high order, a regular reader of the GAZETTE, has a collegiate education and the GAZETTE, das a concentration the biggest heart in Fairfax.
